

PROBLEM STATEMENT

Child's safety project aims at providing a safe and conducive environment for all children through the prevention and response to child abuse, exploitation and neglect.

Who does the problem affect?	Childrens are mostly affected.
What are the boundaries of the problem?	Boundaries are guidelines that you create for yourself, to manage your actions and interactions with other people.
What is the issue?	Most States recognize four major types of maltreatment: physical abuse, neglect, sexual abuse, and emotional abuse.
When does the issue occurs?	Child abuse happens when someone caring for a child hurts a child's feelings or body. It can happen to boys or girls in any family. Often, hurt feelings (or emotional trauma) last long after a hurt body has healed.
Where is the issue occurring?	Child abuse and adult abuse can happen anywhere, including in your own home by someone you trust. Perpetrators tend to look for circumstances where they may be able to abuse their target without getting caught – or where they have access to a high number of people that they can abuse.
Why is it important that we fix the problem?	The healthy development of children is crucial to the future well-being of any society. Because they are still developing, children are especially vulnerable – more so than adults – to poor living conditions such as poverty, inadequate health care, nutrition, safe water, housing and environmental pollution.
